

The sponsorship of the Builders and Partners Group

The engineering group BUILDERS & PARTNERS is happy and proud to provide, as part of a sponsorship, the direction of the work of the Giacometti Institute. All its employees would like to thank the Giacometti Foundation, Paris, for giving them its confidence to participate in this project.

BUILDERS & PARTNERS Group is driven by the conviction that every company is a human community which, to live fully, must find in its daily life satisfactions that go beyond the simple generation of profit. We therefore received as a rich opportunity, the privilege of exercising our management and engineering skills on a project intended to make known to the greatest number the richness of the work of one of the major artists of the twentieth century.

Beyond the technical challenges such as the realization of load-bearing structures over old quarries, the meticulousness required by the implementation of heavy work in a beautiful art-deco building whose facades and decorations are classified Heritage, uncompromising measures taken to ensure the conservation of works of art, our teams have found over this challenge an additional motivation in the message of Alberto Giacometti that they knew to help promote.

Indeed, the artist's approach leaves us as a legacy a key to the meaning of existence that resonates with the values of our company. Excluding himself from currents of thought and preconceived rules, Alberto Giacometti worked tirelessly, always doubting, inspired by the farthest and nearest sources, in pursuit of an absolute as inaccessible as the discovery of the truth. This secret of a vital energy instilled by the quest for an ideal, maintained every day by the work, transcends the framework of art to illuminate the path of each of us, whatever our vocation and whatever the framework of our action, however modest it may be. In terms of modesty, the mythical workshop of Alberto Giacometti that we had the privilege of contributing to reconstitute, shows that an immense work can be conceived in a small space, like the apparent weakness of our ability to influence on the world, whose misleading modesty can make us forget that a small stone that we throw into the water is potentially generating many waves. It is this testimony that the experience proposed by the Giacometti Foundation, Paris, allowed us to convey internally.

The passion of the BUILDERS & PARTNERS group for creativity animates every day its 130 employees on their operations, both on the French territory and on the African continent, on large-scale projects ranging from high-rise buildings to city districts, but also on prestigious rehabilitations for big names in luxury or hotels. Through the creation of the Giacometti Institute, this passion finds a new dimension. Through this sponsorship, it is accomplished in an action at once humble and carrying a universal meaning.
